

Great Prairie AEA Learning Supports

Resource Management Teams

A learning supports resource team provides on-site leadership for efforts to comprehensively address programs and practices that facilitate learning. Teams can reduce fragmentation and increase cost-effectiveness by determining and supporting ways that programs and practices can function cohesively. School-based teams might include, for example, administrators, counselors, psychologists, nurses, social workers, at risk coordinators, special education staff, after school program staff, and Title I and Safe and Drug Free Schools coordinators. A team should also include representatives of any community agency with significant interest in the welfare of students of that school. Resource teams focus on how resources are developed and deployed system-wide, rather than on individual students.
